

Kastle Kurrents

Satellite Edition

Kastle Kurrents special satellite edition has been brought to you today by William, Ross, Poppy, Lexie Oren, Lewis, Jessica, Kyrk and Lestyn all from the Satellite Subcamp.

Never better Neckies

Around the field we have seen everyone wearing neckies. These are some of the neckie we had seen when walking across the camp. We found neckies from Scotland, America, Spain and Canada.

The Battle of the Subcamps

Which is the best subcamp from a satellite campers point of view?

Stewart's theme really blew us away, with Star Wars, One Scout commented on the range of decorations that had like the enemy ships, the TIE Fighters, which were very lifelike and frightening, and offered many great photo opportunities, including a selfie with C3-PO.

game features and we've heard their music is on point.

Morrisons theme was Monopoly. Each day at a random point the song "Take a Chance" will play and each Scout has to hunt down a leader to grab a chance card to earn a prize. Their decorations also mimic that of classic board game features and we've heard their music is on point.

Maclean really sweetened it all up with their Wonka theme. They have amazing decorations which really make it feel like you are entering the factory, they also have interactive photo boards where you can look like an oomph loompa! They have bright and colourful décor spread all across the Subcamp which really caught our eyes.

Robertson rocked with their rock n roll theme, letting campers have their own turn to get creative with a interactive drum set, with load of musical notes and things all over the Subcamp.

Murray took us all on an adventure of movies. Their theme, intentional or not, involved some sort of guessing game as to what movie fit what decoration as they went around the Subcamp.

They also contained red carpet to welcome everyone to the camp to make everyone feel like an award-winning actor, which is always a great feeling.

MacDonald went with a Mario Kart theme. Many Scouts loved how they decorated with life-size Mario and Luigi figures which again, also offers great photo opportunities to make all of your friends jealous.
